Report of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention

Note by the Secretariat

During the period from 1 January to 31 December 2015, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, under its regular procedure, adopted 56 opinions concerning the detention of 91 persons in 37 countries. It also transmitted 83 urgent appeals to 42 Governments concerning 241 individuals, as well as 12 letters of allegations to 11 Governments. States informed the Working Group that they had taken measures to remedy the situation of detainees and in some cases detainees were released. The Working Group is grateful to those Governments that heeded its appeals and that took steps to provide it with the requested information on the situation of detainees.

The Working Group engaged in continuous dialogue with countries that it visited, in particular in respect of its recommendations. In 2015, the Working Group undertook a follow-up visit to Malta. The report on the visit is contained in an addendum to the present report (A/HRC/33/50/Add.1).

I. Introduction

1. The Working Group on Arbitrary Detention was established by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1991/42 and entrusted with the investigation of instances of alleged arbitrary deprivation of liberty, according to the standards set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the relevant international instruments accepted by the States concerned. The mandate of the Working Group was clarified and extended by the Commission in its resolution 1997/50 to cover the issue of administrative custody of asylum seekers and immigrants. At its sixth session, the Human Rights Council assessed and confirmed the mandate of the Working Group (Council resolution 6/4). On 26 September 2013, in its resolution 24/7, the Council extended the Working Group's mandate for a further three-year period.

2. During the period from 1 January to 31 July 2015, the Working Group was composed of Sètondji Roland Jean-Baptiste Adjovi (Benin), Mads Andenas (Norway), José Antonio Guevara Bermúdez (Mexico), Seong-Phil Hong (Republic of Korea) and Vladimir Tochilovsky (Ukraine). On 1 August 2015, Leigh Toomey (Australia) started her functions as a member of the Working Group, replacing Mr. Andenas.

3. In April 2015, at the seventy-second session of the Working Group, Mr. Hong was elected as Chair-Rapporteur, Mr. Guevara Bermúdez as Vice-Chair and Mr. Adjovi as Vice-Chair.

II. Activities of the Working Group in 2015

39. By note verbale dated 2 April 2015, the Government of Nauru declined the Working Group's request to conduct a country visit between May and June 2015, but indicated that it would be pleased to discuss the possibility of such a visit taking place at a later date.

III. Conclusions

45. With respect to the activities of the Working Group, 2015 has been a productive year. The Working Group has renewed its composition, with one new member appointed in 2015 in addition to the three members appointed in 2014; the terms of all four new members have already been extended to 2020. This has created a special dynamic within the Working Group, which has translated into specific action.

46. First, the Working Group has conducted a thorough assessment of its procedure and made some changes in its methods of work. Some changes did not warrant any amendment of the methods of work, representing instead improvements to internal procedures. For instance, the Working Group has decided to make better use of its digital tools to allow better access to the materials for the session. This has led to the members of the Working Group working more during the intersessional periods. The Working Group has also been working to streamline the process for receipt of and response to communications, always keeping in mind the need to work as effectively and promptly as possible and to keep all parties informed.

47. Second, the Working Group has decided to embark on the design of a business plan to better alert the Member States about its workload and commitments while identifying the resources needed for success. Member States will be provided with appropriate information in the near future when the plan is finalized.

48. Third, the new dynamic has already translated into more opinions being issued each session. The Working Group plans to increase further its productivity if resources permit. This will certainly serve the need and uphold the trust of victims, who are increasingly seeking the assistance of the Working Group to remedy violations of their right to liberty.

49. Finally, the Working Group has decided to propose the establishment of an international day against arbitrary detention. Such a day would allow everyone to remember the victims of arbitrary detention, but would also be a day of celebration for those victims who have been released and who are often forgotten. Furthermore, it would be a day of worldwide mobilization against arbitrary detention. Having reviewed the current list of international days, the Working Group noticed that 5

March — the day the Working Group was created by the Commission for Human Rights — is available and could therefore be proposed.

50. It is unfortunate that these positive developments are met with a less than enthusiastic response from the Member States. For example, Member States did not reply to the Working Group's communications and requests for information in 59 per cent of the cases that in which the Working Group adopted an opinion in 2015. Recent communications reports of the special procedure mandate holders reveal a similar rate of response to urgent appeals sent by the Working Group alone or with other special procedure mandate holders. Such lack of responsiveness raises a question about the aim the Member States were pursuing in creating the mechanism. While one must assume that the decision was made to serve the needs of victims worldwide and for the Member States to hold each other accountable, the sole logical deduction is that the States intended the mechanism to resolve the dispute brought by the victims. Thus, the settlement by the Working Group should be enforced in that same spirit, and that is the expectation of victims when they approach the Working Group for assistance. That is also the meaning underlying the constant reminder of the Human Rights Council for States to fully cooperate with the Working Group. It is therefore fair to conclude the present report on the expectation that the next report of the Working Group will reflect further cooperation by the States, both during the communications procedure, in terms of providing timely responses that meaningfully speak to the allegations made, and in the enforcement of the decisions made by the Working Group.

IV. Recommendations

51. The Working Group reiterates the recommendations made in its past reports.

52. The Working Group recommends that Member States increase their cooperation, especially with respect to country visits, urgent appeals and communications, and the enforcement of Working Group opinions, with a view to preventing and/or ending arbitrary detention.

53. The Working Group also recommends that the Human Rights Council request the General Assembly to declare 5 March as the international day against arbitrary detention.
